McAleer was another in that same wrock, and gave a sad sidelight on its effects. No ball player was more than scratched, and it has been said that none of them was seriously hurt. That is wrong, quoth James, when asked about it. One man's career was absolutely spoiled, and from a major leaguer he dropped to the trolley leagues. The man was Wee Willie Sudhof, the St. Louis pitcher whom I afterward traded to Washington for Jacobsen. I couldn't sleep for two nights because of my gales of laughter when Washington agreed to take Sudhof, but when I got Jacobsen I wanted to go litto a hole and hide. ## OLD BASEBALL RULES A JOKE TODAY

Old baseball rules when perused by up-to-date fans read almost like Ben Franklin's almanac or Joe Miller's joke book. Here are a few culled from an old rule book of the National League back in 1882: "No manager, captain, or player shall address the audience.

"The fee and expenses of the umpire shall be paid by the visiting

"No player shall be allowed a substitute in running the bases." "When seven 'balls' have been called by the umpire the batsman shall take one base, providing he does so on the run."

"The batsman shall be called out if a foul ball be caught before touching ground but once." "The batsman, on taking his position, must call for a 'high ball,' a

'low ball,' or a 'fair ball'" When two strikes have been called, should the batter not strike at the next good ball, the umpire shall warn him by calling "good ball."

Should he strike at and fail to hit the ball, or strike and fail to hit the next good ball, three strikes must be called." Here is a clause from an old book on "How to Play the Game. "The catcher's duty is to catch all balls pitched to the bat. He stands either within six feet of the home base or about fifty feet back of it, according to the style of the pitcher's delivery and the circumstance of the play.

"When the pitching is slow, the catcher stands near the home base. When it is swift, he retires at a distance from it. In case of a swift delivery the catcher is required to stand near the base in order to send the ball promptly to second base, so as to cut off the player running to it."
